

theatre workshop

of nantucket

At the close of 2019, we reflected on the events of the past decade at Theatre Workshop and the hope and possibilities ahead as we entered a new one. In this difficult time, as we all try to navigate the future, we are still full of hope and excitement for the possibilities ahead. Wherever we find ourselves at the moment, we manage to stay connected, using technology in new and creative ways to keep theatre alive.

We've been making theatre on Nantucket for 64 years and we'll be doing it for another 64. During this unexpected intermission, we'll focus on serving our community however we can, and when we open our doors once again to gather and create, we will need all of you there to support us. From the producers to the audience, from our board, council and friends, to the hardworking staff and talented creatives who bring a production to life, we will call on all of you to play your unique and integral part.

We look forward to the magical moment very soon when we see each other at the theatre.

Sincerely,

Justin Cerne, Artistic Director

Bethany Oliver, Managing Director
